PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

Dear Parents,

It is hard to believe that it is already March. There has been a lot of teaching and learning going on at Rose Creek. I enjoy watching the students and teachers interact with each other during a lesson. We have the best teachers and students! It is a pleasure to work with all of them.

This month students are learning about Pledge #6 "I will include everyone." "It's not enough to teach kids what not to do; we also have to teach them what to do to promote kindness and compassion among their peers." Katie Hurley

Students will learn how to include everyone and why it is important. Students often feel hurt and excluded, so they respond by hurting and excluding. Excluding is a form of relational aggression. Relational aggression is a behavior that intends to harm others by damaging and manipulating their relationships. Other forms of relational aggression include gossiping, rumor spreading, alliance building, and public humiliation. A survey done through The Ophelia Project shows that 48% of students are exposed to relational aggression and students 11 to 15 are exposed to 33 acts during the week. Many bully prevention programs are teaching children pro-social behaviors to help them make positive choices in school and in the real world. Parents often ask how to help their child be kind and what to do when they are excluded. The best thing parents can do is empower their kids to act as includers. Follow these steps to teach your child how to include others:

1. Listen and empathize: When we empathize with our kids, we teach them to do the same for others.
2. Be an includer: If we want our children to reach out to others we need to do the same.
3. Looks for someone who needs a friend: Teach your child to look for someone who might need a friend.
4. Talk about unintentional exclusion: In helping our children process emotions, we show them that kindness counts!

Happy St. Patrick's Day this month,
Mrs. Egan
